SHARE and NATOA have developed the Reconciliation and Responsible Investment workshop series to provide Aboriginal Trusts with the opportunity to deepen their understanding of responsible investment approaches and to explore the challenges and opportunities associated with considering community values and community development aspirations in the management and investment of Aboriginal trusts. The workshops will feature sessions on topics such as:

- Responsible investment and fiduciary duty
- How to work effectively with investment managers on responsible investment
- Case studies of responsible investment strategies to promote reconciliation, the protection of Indigenous People's rights and aboriginal employment, training and economic development

The workshops will provide opportunities for broad participation from participants to ensure meaningful discussions and knowledge-sharing on the opportunities for innovative investment strategies that reflect both prudent management and preservation of trusts along with broader community values and community development mandates.
