Decolonizing the Narrative Conversation Series is a monthly online conversation session that invites leading Indigenous Art creators to talk about their practices and processes.

In August, Paul Seesequasis will discuss the ways the archival Indigenous images, from the outside gaze, can be reclaimed and reframed, and will explore the work of several contemporary Indigenous photographers as visual recorders of resistance and resurgence.

This session takes place over two days:

August 18: Paul Seesequasis does a presentation of his work.

August 19: Be part of a conversation with Paul Seesequasis and Reneltta Arluk. This second session is the space intended for your questions and comments.
